

I do not want the FCC to weaken the "do not call" provisions of the NJ program. A number of the telemarketers have become rude and insistent. When I complain to the company represented, they disclaim responsibility because the company outsources to a third party. Accordingly, the business relationship exception is subject to abuse -- particularly when the represented company does not accept responsibility for the actions of its contractors.

Therefore, I oppose any measures which would weaken the protections under NJ's provisions.
